We human beings are constantly growing and learning.

The unlearned and the unfinished will always come back as an opportunity to overcome.

The greatest challenges are often too close to us, sometimes we cannot see them.

Sometimes we suffer the consequences of not healing the paternal or maternal bond.

Sometimes people have been present but we suffer the absence and distance as if they had never been there.

We always try to carry on and in many different ways this inner child can carry the lack or bitterness as well as the confidence and joy.

The past makes us but it should not define us because we can fix, heal and repair things even with those who have already rested.

So we grow up and one day we develop relationships with friends, co-workers, partners, friends, other family members.

And those other relationships will be affected or benefited according to what we keep in our heart from that paternal and maternal seed, from what was sown in us.
